Meandering

By WASH FAYETTE

Have you noticed the great number of fireflies or lightning bugs that have been displaying their tail lights during the early hours of the night, particularly during the recent hot nights?

Out in the open places, such as wheat fields, corn fields, and in fact almost everywhere, thousands of the sparks may be seen within a few minutes, as the curious insects come forth from their daylight retreat and carry their little lanterns about, flashing them off and on at frequent intervals for hours at a time.

The type of fireflies we have in this region are the common "lightning bugs," but in some areas, chiefly in the tropics, the fire beetles are much larger than the ordinary fireflies, and display an even greater light than those common in this area.

Many of you are familiar with the glowworms that display their light on the ground or near the ground, and in spading up ground where there is leafmould, in the winter, have found these glow worms even then.

It may interest you to know that the glowworms are nothing more or less than the wingless females of one species of the fireflies.

So far as known there is no heat about the light displayed by fireflies and the light is supposed to be due to oxidation of a substance secreted in the abdomen of the strange insects.

She remains anonymous but she loves hollyhocks.

That's why some woman phoned in here early in the morning to compliment us on the hollyhock story in this column. But, she had something to add:

"You don't need to ride out of the city to see pretty hollyhocks," she said firmly. "There are hollyhocks in the alley at 317 Forest Street just as pretty as those along the Columbus Road. Some of them look like roses—they're double hollyhocks. And they're all colors, too," she exclaimed.

Then, before I could ask her name, she hung up.

Numerous evidences of the good work of the WPA during those lean years before the war, are still in evidence throughout the rural community.

I mean the little buildings, all just alike, some four by five by six feet, that were built by WPA labor here; hauled to the spot where excavations and foundations had already been made by other WPA labor, and set up by WPA labor.

Most of these structures were placed at the back end of gardens, or other remote corners about farm premises, and scores of them were constructed and set through-out the county as one of the numerous projects of WPA.

For many years to come these little reminders of WPA days will be outstanding examples of the work of a whole group of "specialists."

When I walked into police headquarters Captain Jess Ellis and Policeman Vaiden Long were busily engaged in scouring the counter and desks in the room.

"How come?" I asked.

"Well," said Captain Ellis, "it seems that someone got hold of some pine oil we use in water as a deodorant and put it in the spray gun instead of the insecticide used in the gun. Well, you can guess what happened! When the fog struck was coated with oil, and that includes about everything in the room. That's why we are washing it off."

REFUGEE-SPY EXECUTED;

HIS ESPIONAGE FAILED

LONDON, July 12.—(AP)—Joseph Jan Van Hove, a former Antwerp waiter who arrived here from Belgium last February 11 posing as a refugee, was executed at Pentonville prison today as a German spy—the 16th person to be executed in Britain for espionage since the beginning of the war.

Van Hove was convicted on May 24 at a trial at which it was charged he was sent to Britain by the Germans in an attempt to obtain information about Allied plans for the invasion of western France. His mission was described as a complete failure.

Here is a view of the smashed city of Caen, France, finally captured by the Allies after days of attack. Capture of Caen opens the way to Paris, 125 miles away. This is a radiophoto. (International)

Stolen Island Bases Hit from Sea and Air Over Broad Expanse
Of Pacific While Saipan Mopped Up as Landing
Strips Built for Stepping Up Bombing

By J. B. KRUEGER

Pacific Commanders Nimitz and MacArthur blandly left it to the Japanese today to ponder where the next big American smash would fall in the accelerating drive across the Pacific, now that Saipan has been overwhelmed.

Non-committally they hammered at enemy strongholds stretched across the 4,000 watery miles from Ceram to the Kuriles. The smashes, by warship and sea and land planes, aided in consolidating the Saipan and Noemfoor Island victories but were too wide for that alone. Tokyo had its feelers out, broadcasting that a very powerful enemy fleet was prowling the waters off Tinian, just south of Saipan. On the latter island U. S. infantry and marines mopped up, even capturing some Japanese swimming out to sea.

PARATROOPERS BEHEADED
BY NAZIS DURING INVASION
WOUNDED VETERAN SAYS

TEMPLE, Tex., July 12.—(AP)—During the invasion of France Allied paratroopers were "hung in trees with their heads cut off" by the Germans, a wounded glider infantry scout declares.

Pvt. Kenneth P. Knight, who was flown from the front to McCloskey General Hospital here, said in an interview yesterday that "Germans hung them up there with their feet in the air, the stumps of their necks toward the ground, almost at eye level. One look was enough."

"I saw another paratrooper with his throat cut," the former professional baseball player from Kansas City, Kas., continued.

He got some satisfaction for the atrocities he witnessed. Said he:

"I got three Germans with my bayonet and others with my rifle in the first wild fighting push after we landed."

ENTOMBED MINERS

GIVEN UP FOR DEAD

Only Eerie Echoes Come Up
Through Air Shafts

BELLAIRE, July 12.—(AP)—The 66 men entombed since last Wednesday in nearby Powhatan mine were given up for dead today.

Nelson Hovey, assistant state director of industrial relations, announced all hope was abandoned for the coal miners yesterday after rescue workers failed in a final effort to contact them through a shaft three inches in diameter.

The vent was sunk from the surface to the spot 400 feet below where the men were trapped by fire. Earlier a nine-inch shaft was drilled nearby, but no response came to rescue workers' calls.

The high carbon monoxide content of air samples taken through the smaller shaft yesterday convinced officials that the miners were dead, Hovey reported.

TOLEDO, O., July 12.—(AP)—Three city street division employees yesterday found $495 in postal savings certificates and $125 in war bonds while they were cleaning out sewers.

OHIO'S DROUGHT
EASED BY RAINS

Water Supplies Still Short in Many Areas, However

COLUMBUS, July 12.—(AP)—Thunder showers last night brought temporary relief to sections of parched Ohio but today most of the state still was in the grip of a drought that threatened water supplies and brought a sharp scaling down of government crop estimates.

Central and southern Ohio were bearing the brunt of the protracted weather. Columbus was in its 19th rainless day, along with many other smaller cities and towns in Central Ohio. Cincinnati had its first light rain since May 17 last Sunday.

Many streams were reported drying up and farmers were hauling water to their stock. Many wells had run low. In Cleveland Water Commissioner George W. Hamlin forbade residents to sprinkle lawns, asserting that pumping facilities were so low war plant production was threatened.

Cleveland Hard Hit
Cleveland seemed almost as hard hit as central Ohio. A trickle of rain fell there yesterday, but it was the first time since June 23.

REP. CLARENCE BROWN
ASSERTS 5TH TERM
IS PRESIDENT'S AIM

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Congressman Clarence Brown, Blanchester, Ohio, Republican, says President Roosevelt will seek a fifth term if elected a fourth time. Brown, Republican National Committee member for the Buckeye State, said yesterday, "I have constantly believed that the president would be a candidate for a fourth term and if elected and served the four years he undoubtedly would be a candidate for a fifth term."

Rep. George W. Bender of Cleveland said there was no element of surprise in the president's statement but that if the chief executive were "forthright" he would tell the people—particularly his own party—his choice for a running mate.

YANKS HAMMER MUNICH AS SOUTH OF FRANCE RAIDED

By GLADWIN HILL

LONDON, July 12.—(AP)—Nearly 2,000 American planes battered the great south German city of Munich again today while another force from Italy struck once more into the south of France, bombing four rail targets.

More than 1,200 of the planes assaulting Munich on this second successive day were heavy bombers; the rest were long range fighters. The Swiss said three planes landed on their territory.

RECOGNITION OF DEGAULLE
MAY BE EXPECTED SOON

LONDON, July 12.—(AP)—The decision of the United States to recognize the right of the De Gaulle committee to handle civil administration in liberated areas of France coincides with British views and means a three-way agreement may be announced soon, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden indicated in Commons today.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Force, July 12.—(AP)—American infantry dug out entrenched Germans at bayonet point within sight of the strategic road center of St. Lo today in another dawn attack while on the Allied left, ferocious enemy counterattacks petered out around Caen. A total of 124 German tanks had been knocked out on the two fronts.

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS Allied Expeditionary Force, July 12.—(AP)—Secretary of War Stimson arrived in Britain today for an inspection of the European theater of operations. Stimson came to Britain from Italy.

Yanks Advance Slowly
Foot slogging American First Army infantry pushed forward slowly on a 48-mile front below the throat of the Cherbourg peninsula within two to four miles of St. Lo, important provincial capital of 15,000. St. Andre-de-L'Epine was by-passed, enveloped, then captured.

For the second day running, the GI's struck at dawn but this time after only slight artillery preparation. They advanced slowly over soggy fields and marshland littered with burned out German tanks, thrown swiftly into the fray. The German intention, a front line dispatch said, had been to press with tanks through the narrow beachhead to Isigny on the sea and thus split Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley's front.

On the west coast below La Haye du Puits, the GI's cleared

GOVERNMENT HEALTH
PROGRAM PROPOSED

Low-income Groups To Get
Care Under Plan

WASHINGTON, July 12.—(AP)—Dr. Thomas Parran proposed today a post-war civilian health program calling for nearly $2,000,000,000 in new hospital construction and federal aid to the states for the medical care of low-income groups.

The surgeon-general of the public health service told a Senate subcommittee on war-time health and education the peace-time demand for hospitalization and medical care will "exceed anything we have known in the past."

His prepared statement said the availability of complete health services to more than ten million men and women in the armed forces had created a desire for these advantages that "will not be forgotten after the war."

TROOP TRAIN WRECK

DEATH TOLL REACHES 34

JELICO, Tenn., July 12.—(AP)—The death toll from a troop train wreck in Narrows Gorge near here Thursday night rose to 34 today with the Army announcement of the death of Pvt. Ray W. Parker of Trenton, O.

Parker's death in Oak Ridge hospital was the 31st fatality among Army enlisted personnel, the engineer and fireman of the Louisville and Nashville train, and one yet unidentified body completing the list.

BOUNTIFUL WHEAT HARVEST
BRINGS PROBLEM OF PLENTY AS PILES OF GRAIN GROW

KANSAS CITY, July 12.—(AP)—The harvest, almost unbelievably bountiful is rolling in.

Granaries, elevators and mills are gorged with the wheat. Railroads already overburdened and weighted down with war, chug wearily along with load after load of the grain.

And still the wheat piles up, in bright, golden mounds—by the tracks and in the fields.

Representatives of railroads, mills, elevators, government agencies and the army met here today with Sen. Clyde M. Reed (R-Kans.) to decide how to solve the problem of plenty.

Reed said the chief worries were: (1) too few boxcars, (2) too few helpers to get the cars uniced. One possible source of labor, Reed said, was the army's seventh service command at Omaha. He has telegraphed the command to ask how many prisoners of war would be available (Reed has heard there may be as many as 3,000) to help unload wheat.

"We always have regarded the normal loading capacity at Kansas City to be approximately 1,500 cars a day," Reed continued. "I am informed only about half that number actually are being unloaded. If that's true, we intend to learn why it is true."

33 German Generals
Lost Since Invasion

(By The Associated Press)

Allied communiques and German reports showed today that Hitler's German army has lost 33 general officers killed or captured—an average of almost one a day since the invasion of France June 6—on his western and eastern fronts.

Two thirds of the number have been bagged by the Russians—three killed and 19 captured—in sweeping advances bringing disaster on the Nazis' eastern front.

The Allies in France have killed seven and captured three top commanders, including Rear Admiral Walter Hennecke, taken at Cherbourg.

Killed in an airplane crash, the location not identified, was Col. Gen. Edward Dietl, commander of seven German divisions in Finland.

The first German general to fall was Artillery Gen. Eric Marcks, whose death was announced in Berlin June 13, a week after the Allies landed in France. Next in Normandy to be killed was Maj. Gen. Fritz Witt. Then the toll rose with Lt. Gen. Hellmuth, Lt. Gen. Richer, Maj. Gen. Steegmann, Maj. Gen. Mifallay, and Col. Gen. Friedrich Dollman, commander of the German seventh army in France. Dollman possibly was a victim of bombs.

At Cherbourg, besides Admiral Hennecke, the Americans took Lt. Gen. Carl Wilhelm Von Schlieben, and Maj. Gen. Statter.

Death came in Russia to Generals Pfeiffer, Martinek and Schuenemann.

The Nazi commander captured yesterday by the Russians was General Volker, commanding the 27th German Army Corps. Three Lt. Gen. Muller, Maj. Gen. Klammer, Maj. Gen. Schmidt—surrounded the day before.

There already had been 15 others snatched by the Soviets from Germany's military leadership.

ANTI-NEW DEALERS

Democratic Convention

CHICAGO, July 12.—(AP)—The American Democratic national committee, an anti-administration organization, announced today it would meet in Chicago during the time the Democratic national convention is in session here. The Democratic conclave opens next Wednesday.

John J. O'Connor, former New York congressman and chairman of the group's executive committee, said in a statement issued at the committee's national headquarters here:

"We will be joined by the several other anti-New Deal groups . . . and we expect our group will be augmented also by those delegates to the Democratic convention who will be thrown out or treated roughly there, as expected. . . ."

GOP Chairman Says He Is
'Perpetuating' Himself

By WILLIAM W. TYLER
ALBANY, N. Y., July 12.—(AP)—Herbert Brownell, Jr., National Republican chairman, today asserted President Roosevelt was using the title of commander-in-chief as "a pretext to perpetuate himself in political office."

Brownell, who was an overnight guest of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Republican presidential nominee, was asked at a press conference for comment on the president's statement that he would "as a good soldier," accept a fourth term nomination.

"Mr. Roosevelt is the first of 32 presidents of the United States to claim that the title of commander-in-chief makes him a soldier and to use that title as a pretext to perpetuate himself in political office," the National chairman declared.

YANKS SLUG ON THROUGH TOUGH
FIGHT IN ITALY

Germans Getting Scared as Russians Near Prussia;
Air Attacks Continue

By DWIGHT PITKIN
(By The Associated Press)

German counter-attacks executed at a heavy cost in armor have thwarted spectacular breakthroughs by the Allies on the offensive in Normandy but "they were held and we have made some gains," Supreme Headquarters announced today.

The Germans had less success on the eastern front. The Red army which in a year has all but cleared pre-1939 Russia of the invader blazed away against faltering German lines. Carving out fresh gains, the Russians drove westward from a point less than 49 miles east of the East Prussian border. Moscow said that if the pace persisted the fighting would reach German soil by the end of the week.

Yanks Near Leghorn

On the Italian front, the Germans also were resisting bitterly. Nevertheless, American light armored elements captured Castiglione on the west coast, bringing the Fifth army to within eight miles of Livorno (Leghorn).

The Berlin radio made no attempt to minimize Russian advances. A German commentator declared "the supreme test" now has come, since "the distance between us and the battlefield has almost vanished."

Ankara reported conversations about there which may lead to Turkish participation in the war before the summer's end. In Madrid, it was reported that Germany has made at least six attempts since February to gain a negotiated peace. Berlin radio said "terrorists" set fire to the house of Marcel Deat, Vichy minister of labor, at Arbonne in central France.

Bombers Over Germany

The German radio reported American heavy bombers plunging into the Reich today for the second successive day as Supreme Allied Headquarters disclosed that Allied front-support aircraft had executed one of the most intensive attacks of the war on enemy armor.

On the eastern and western fronts.

GERMAN FUGITIVES
CAUGHT NEAR CAMP

Nazis Recognized by Women
When They Ask for Food

GETTYSBURG, Pa., July 12.—(AP)—Two Germans who escaped from a war prisoners' camp on the Gettysburg battlefield July 3 were back in military custody today but apparently faced no punishment for their futile break for liberty.

Captain Lawrence, army officer in charge of the war prisoners' camp said "the prisoners were returned to military custody and shortly after their arrival here were sent back to their base camp."

He added that no punishment will be inflicted on the men, identified by Captain Lawrence as Thomas Kostaniak, 27, and Axel Ostermaier, 22, because "under international law they did not commit any crime."

The men had eluded all searching parties until hunger brought them to the home of Mrs. Rachel Bentzel and her daughter-in-law, 30 miles from their internment camp.

The women recognized the Nazis from newspaper pictures and while the elder Mrs. Bentzel furnished them with food, her daughter-in-law ran a quarter of a mile to a nearby farm house and summoned state police.

WORKER ELECTROCUTED

WHEAT HARVEST NEAR THE END IN THIS AREA

Total Yield in County Is Estimated at Near 500,000 Bushels

Wheat harvest is rapidly nearing the end in Fayette County, and the total yield this year is estimated at 450,000 to 500,000 bushels, or about half the big yield in 1942, when the acreage was much greater and yields were far better.

Nearly all of the wheat was harvested without having been rained upon, and was of unusually good quality.

Combining was virtually completed last week and a few scattered jobs remain to be threshed this week before the final wheat threshing is ended.

Oats threshing will be carried out almost immediately, and the yield will run from a few bushels to the acre to a normal yield.

At the Gwynn Elevators Wednesday it was stated that the company had room for only a few thousands of bushels more this season.

Part of the elevator space was filled with soybeans, but most of the 350,000 bushels capacity has been filled with new wheat.

Most of the farmers have sold their wheat for cash, some are storing, and others will take the government loan, it is indicated.

Most of the wheat this year made 15 to 20 bushels to the acre, although yields as low as 8 bushels to the acre were reported.

The peak yield was 37.5 bushels to the acre on a small tract near this city.

mandy fronts yesterday Allied fighter-bombers and rocket planes destroyed 28 German tanks and damaged 16 more. This is equal to about one-fifth of the tank strength of a German armored division.

The coup against the enemy armor was executed despite bad weather which kept support sorties down to a low total of 1,700. The weather continued bad last night and operations for the third night running were confined to simultaneous attacks by RAF Mosquitos attacked industrial targets in the Ruhr Valley without loss. Sky fleets totalling some 4,000 planes, including heavy bombers from both Britain and Italy, pounded three vital German targets yesterday—the Munich area, Toulon on the Mediterranean and flying-bomb sites in northern France.

One force last night hit industrial installations in the German Ruhr and others attacked Nazi transport and supply dumps in the Chalon-Vitry area 90 miles east of Paris.

Reds Surge Westward The Red army, knocking large new holes in the already sagging German lines, surged westward today from a point less than 49 miles east of the east Prussian border at a pace which, if continued, would carry the fighting to German soil by the end of the week.

(The German communists placed "the advancing Soviets" west of Alytus in Lithuania, 51 miles from east Prussia, 33 miles south of Kaunas and within 27 miles of the strategic East Prussia-Riga Railway over which two Nazi armies in the Baltic must be supplied in part. Retreats along the whole central front were reported by Berlin. The surrounded Wilno garrison was being supplied by air.)

Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky's cavalry and tanks drove the spearhead toward East Prussian in a 20-mile advance where the spit of the province known as the Swalki Triangle sticks out north of Grodno.

General advances along the entire 350-mile front between Latvia and the Pripyat Marshes swept through more than 400 places yesterday, killing at least 4,000 German soldiers and bringing about the capture of hundreds more.

The new forward sweeps placed the Red army actually within striking distance of Kaunas, 45 miles away; Grodno, 56; Bialystok, 51; and Daugavpils, less than 18. Military observers in Moscow saw a direct threat to Bialystok and Grodno in the strong central blow. Pinsk, at the edge of the Pripyat Marshes to the south, already was lost tactically to the Nazis, although resistance continued there.

(As the Russians sped onward, the German radio commentator Kurt Dittmar last night gravely warned the German people that "the supreme test" now has come, since "the distance between us and the battlefield has almost vanished.")

German Scared The Office of War Information quoted the Stockholm newspaper Afton Tidningen as reporting the "highest state of alarm" in East Prussia. Afton Tidningen said the Germans had closed the frontiers and mined all approaches, adding that "the people fear Russian parachutists will land before the actual attack on East Prussia."

Red army troops streaming toward Kaunas astride the railway west of Wilno engulfed more than 100 communities, including Woronow.

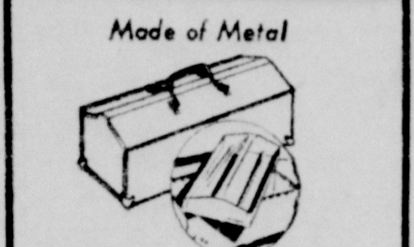

The nearest approach to the East Prussian border came in the Lida area to the south.

The westward advance toward Grodno and Bialystok, both prize junctions on the Warsaw Railway, continued on a wide front ranging from Lida, northeast of Grodno, to points southwest of Baranowicz.

stiff opposition while advancing from Casale toward Pastina, where the Germans showed the utmost determination to delay their progress.

American troops further east also encountered tough going northeast of Lajatico, where the Nazis counter-attacked fiercely, but they repelled the thrust and Lajatico itself was brought under attack. Late dispatches from the field said the Nazis still were holding out within the town.

In the upper Tiber Valley Eighth army troops occupied the villages of Meone Morra and Muchignano and cleared 3,000-foot-high Mount Civitella of the enemy.

At the same time Allied tanks crossed the Nestore River, upper tributary of the Tiber, and advanced some distance beyond the river. Further east in the Pietralunga area, a German counter-attack caused a slight loss of ground by the Allies.

Meanwhile on the Adriatic coast Italian troops were credited with a slight advance in the vicinity of the Musone River and the city of Ancona was brought under artillery fire by the Allies, who now are only eight miles away.

In falling back north of the Musone River the Germans gave up the villages of Petovaliane, Trovigliano and Avenale.

Allied airmen flew more than 800 sorties yesterday, during which they carried out a heavy bomber attack on the French harbor of Toulon. Enemy communications behind the Italian battlefield also were attacked and fighters carried out offensive sweeps over Yugoslavia and Albania. Four planes were reported missing.

Bombers Aid Doughboys Medium and light American bombers intervened explosively in the ground fighting, striking the fuel supplies of Marshal Rommel's tanks and trucks behind the line. They also strafed German reserves moving up to St. Lo, and hit a bridge near Paris.

Lessening enemy artillery fire south of La Haye du Puits indicated the Germans were in retreat before the American onslaught, which had pushed to within three miles of Lessay, enemy coastal anchor, and the whole Nazi flank at Periers was threatened from the east and the south.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's offensive around Caen made little progress and lost ground in some places in fierce fighting.

The supreme command's communique No. 73 announced 28 German tanks had been destroyed and 16 more damaged by air attacks near St. Lo, Hottot and Vimont. Vimont is south of Troarn, which is east of Caen. Field dispatches disclosed 80 tanks had been destroyed around Caen in 72 hours.

Rommel Counterattack Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel's blazing counterattacks struck everywhere except south of La Haye du Puits, but the heaviest came at Colombelles, along the River Orne in the Caen sector, which the British had captured the day before.

Here the Germans pushed in both tanks and infantry and today the exact position of British lines, which at one time reached the outskirts of Faubourg de Vaucelles, remained obscure.

The next heaviest fighting was going on around St. Lo, where the Americans had pushed south to within two miles of that Nazi fortress town.

Crack German troops attacked violently and bitter battles resulted. The American push had endangered the whole German western flank from St. Lo to the sea.

The Doughboys made their largest gain in a three-quarters of a mile drive south of La Meauffe along the River River four miles north of St. Lo. It was south of St. Lo that American Thunderbolts caught a German Panzer column on the open road and destroyed or damaged 31 armored vehicles.

RAF rocket-firing aircraft accounted for 16 others in heavy fighting around Hottot and Vimont.

British troops forced their way forward for limited gains in the fighting around Hottot, south of Tilly-sur-Seuilles, and the Germans reacted violently.

Only limited gains were made by Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's forces west of the Vire River and south of Carentan, but the threat in these two sectors forced the Germans to withdraw south of La Haye du Puits toward Lessay.

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

General Eisenhower's warning against over-optimism about the duration of the war is a point well taken, since Allied progress in this last round of the battle against Hitler, when we must hit him with everything we have, depends heavily on maintenance of an all-out effort by the Allied home fronts.

However, while we certainly must expect bitter fighting and heavy losses, there's no reason to think the Supreme Commander means to discourage us in the belief that the Nazi savage is rocking on his heels. The Fuehrer's distress, both on the battlefield and on the home front, is plain enough. What we dare not overlook is that no matter how weakened a fighter may be, he isn't beaten until he's knocked out.

The dire strait of Germany's war economy is made clear in the report by the foreign economic administration at Washington that the Reich faces "substantial certainty of defeat in 1945 if not in 1944." It provides further proof, if any were needed, that this is a war of resources and that the Allies are infinitely the stronger.

The FEA report says the Nazis will be in a nearly hopeless position by the end of this year, with prospective expenditure of war material exceeding their rate of production. German raw material supplies for war are on a "bare hand-to-mouth basis." This has been brought about by bombing, by land offensives and by blockades.

But this shortage is only part of the grim story. German newspapers disclose the Nazis are struggling desperately to avert defeat on the transportation front, upon which Hitler must depend not only for quick movement of troops at this crucial moment but for shipment of all supplies to the battle zone.

This critical situation in German transport has been produced (1) by the terrific Allied bombings over a long period, and (2) through sabotage by the increasingly active underground armies in the conquered countries. The position is so bad that all self-propelled and horse-drawn vehicles are being diverted to bolster the crippled railways. The government-controlled press is appealing to the German people to understand the complete stoppage of railway traffic in certain areas, and not become impatient.

And we must add still another chapter to Hitler's tale of despair. He no longer has sufficient supplies and men with which to meet concerted pressure that has resulted from the opening of the second front in France, the continuation of the Allied drive in Italy, the ceaseless rain of death and destruction from the skies, and the launching of the multiple Russian offensive on a scale more stupendous than anything previously seen in the eastern theater of bloody strife.

Hitler's loss in man-power has far exceeded his supply. He is forced to supplement his weakened ranks with mere boys and men of fifty. As for materiel, the foreign administration report tells us that Russia alone has forced the Germans to consume finished supplies almost equal to their total production for the three years of the war.

Thus the Fuehrer is racing madly about in a closed circle of disaster.

menace, announced 30,000 children had been removed from the city to safer districts.

The Chinese were stemming the Japanese tide endangering Hengyang, capturing Yungfeng, 45 miles to the northeast and putting up a stout battle with another force near Liling 80 miles northeast of the strategic rail city. U. S. planes destroyed 50 supply boats and two bridges.

Brig. Gen. Clinton Vincent told his eastern China composite wing fliers their attacks had blunted the enemy drive on Hengyang, making the offensive "so unacceptably costly that the enemy has no recourse but retreat."

In Yunnan Chinese troops were set to assaulting Tengchung, Lungling and Mangshih, enemy bases controlling a section of the Burma Road.

British troops continued chasing the bewildered remnants of two Japanese divisions which had tried to conquer northeast India. A strong enemy force was routed after a two-day battle near Chepu.

DON KELLOUGH WITH MARINES IN DEATH FIGHT

Killed Many Japs in Bitter Battle Before He Was Wounded

"It was tough pulling the trigger the first time," for Pfc. Don S. Kellough of the U. S. Marines when he first went into action against the Japs on the Marshall Islands, but after he saw the man he was aiming at "drop like a rock," it was all right.

Pfc. Kellough, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kellough of the Prairie Pike, was one of a greatly outnumbered and surrounded unit of Leathernecks which finally fought its way through and killed all of the enemy during a bloody skirmish in the Solomons, in which he was wounded.

Sgt. Murray Lewis, a Marine combat correspondent from New York, told of the harrowing experiences of that little band of Marines in a special story to the Record-Herald.

Pfc. Don Kellough

Pfc. Kellough is now recuperating in a military hospital. His mother is not sure where the hospital is, but she thinks it is either in the Hawaiian Islands or on one of those in the South Pacific the Yank conquests have left peacefully behind. Her 19-year-old son, she said, had written his family that he is "getting along just fine," but he has never given them any details either of the fighting or his wound.

Don enlisted in the Marine Corps before the Japs attacked Pearl Harbor and while a student in Washington C. H. High School. He entered the service October 6, 1941, and was among the first Americans to attack the Japs on the islands they had stolen in the far Pacific. When the war is won he intends to come back and finish high school and go to college.

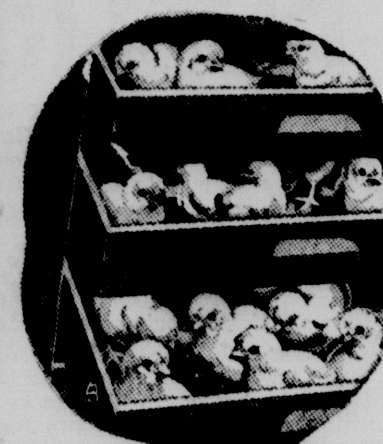

Describing the battle in which Pfc. Kellough was wounded, T-Sgt. Lewis wrote:

"As the last of the Japanese were being wiped out, a stray sniper's bullet crashed against Kellough's leg and put him in a

In a recent ceremony, he was presented with the Purple Heart Medal by Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith, USMC, commanding general of the Fifth Amphibious Corps.

"Being a Browning automatic rifleman, I knew I would get plenty of chances to shoot at Japs," he said. "Before that sniper got me, however, I really felt as if I had been overworked."

"It was tough pulling the trigger for the first time. For a minute, I didn't want to. Then it was all right—especially when I saw the man I was aiming at drop like a rock. After that, it seemed as though I was constantly changing magazines on my rifle. I got rid of plenty of ammunition."

"The band of Marines moved ahead rapidly, cleaning out enemy machine gun positions and dug-outs in their path. The Japs were being pushed into the sea."

"During the fighting which followed, Kellough found himself behind the stump of a coconut tree, which was about hip-high. Suddenly his platoon sergeant yelled out, 'Here they come behind us!'"

"The Marines formed themselves into a tight defensive group and sprayed the area with deadly fire. Kellough was wounded as he was changing the magazine on his weapon. Fortunately for him, the fighting was in its last stages and he was able to obtain immediate medical first aid."

DROUGHT IN OHIO IS EASED BY THUNDERSHOWERS BUT WATER SUPPLIES SCARCE

Other northern Ohio communities also reported showers yesterday.

John W. Baker, Cincinnati area war manpower commissioner, said many farmers, their crops destroyed, had sought jobs in the city.

Temperatures throughout the state ranged generally in the high 90's yesterday. It was 99 in Columbus and Springfield; Cleveland had 95, Toledo 93, Youngstown 96 and Dayton 94. Cincinnati reported the day's high—101.2 degrees.

There was no general relief in sight, the Weather Bureau stated. Crops Suffered

The U. S. Crop Reporting Service released its monthly forecast for Ohio, and it was far from encouraging.

Corn was reported suffering in many sections of the state. Some fields were reported under-sized and drying up, others in tassel. Most corn needed rain. If it all matures, however, there is prospect of a 185,053,000-bushel crop. The time hay yield is down five percent, forecast at 3,459,000 tons compared to 3,505,000 tons last year. This is due, in part, to a decreased alfalfa acreage. Hot, dry weather has cut the Ohio potato crop, the report disclosed. Conditions point to a harvest of 7,800,000 bushels compared to 8,550,000 bushels last year.

The one really bright spot is the fruit forecast. Commercial apple production is expected to be double last year's output, or around 5,561,000 bushels; peaches, triple last year's total or 984,000 bushels, pear and grape crops are expected to better than double the 1943 yield, while the cherry tonnage is expected to total between six and eight times as much as the 1943 picking.

Future Education

One aspect of life in which a boom is expected after the war is education. Many young soldiers went directly from school to arms. Many had not finished high school. They had been delayed or had gone to work. Many of these, say educators, want to go right back to finish their courses. They know now what they've missed.

Men over thirty who had been taking night school courses want to go on bettering themselves. Men partly through college want to get their degrees. Men who got out of school as early as possible, and never wanted to learn much while there, want to get what they can of a belated training.

Colleges may be able to handle their groups without much change in arrangements. But high schools and technical schools should now be doing careful planning to take care of these new students. Adult education institutions need a keen survey of present resources and probable future demands on them. Public libraries will be busy and will want to improve readers' adviser departments.

Languages to enable a man to get around in the world, history to help him understand how we got to be as we are, other social sciences to enable us to do better from now on, mathematics on which to base modern science, vocational training to help make a better living, literature, music and art to ennoble leisure, philosophy to help him to understand his universe and the relation to it of his own soul—all these now attract men in the fighting forces. The demand will be strong and wide. It's time to prepare for it.

Poland's Evil Genius

Colonel Josef Beck's death has relieved Poland of the embarrassing question of what to do with him after the war. As the Polish foreign minister he was anti-democratic, anti-Semitic, and possessed of the delusion that he could do business with Hitler. Trying to play Germany and Russia off against each other, he ended by displeasing both. If any man can be held responsible for the fate of Poland, that man is Beck.

Had he lived, there would have been a strong movement to liquidate him, legally or otherwise. There would have been this added incentive, that Beck had recently been catering to the Nazis, and hoping for an appointment as gauleiter. This was the finishing stroke for those who had previously thought him a sincere patriot.

National Strength

Our two wars that the democracies are waging against the destroyers are proceeding smoothly and powerfully. Viewed historically it is a familiar story.

Predatory war-makers arise, prepared by long planning and careful building up of their military resources, and strike at free nations grown rich and soft with peace. At first the assailants seem to succeed, overrunning large territories, levying tribute and fencing in the areas and natural resources that they expect to exploit. It may look for a time as if they are destined to overrun a land or a continent, or even the whole world.

But the Alexanders and Caesars and Hitlers never really succeed, in the long run. For their aggression arouses the free and fat nations to fight for their possessions.

Today's Horoscope

The person who has a birthday today is blessed with unlimited ability. You would find success in anything you undertook if you applied all your efforts faithfully. You are upright, have fastidious tastes, and sound judgment; are dependable, loving, enjoy and seek a harmonious life with pleasant surroundings. Minor annoyances through relatives give place to good fortune and more optimistic conditions and greater activity, in the next year. This period is excellent for military and government affairs. The child who is born today will be successful in vocational matters, the perceptions being keen and enterprise strong, although occasional clashes with authority are not unlikely.

sions. And that is the latter's salvation, materially and spiritually. For in the struggle to retain or regain the property and freedom and civilized way of life that they have developed, they toughen themselves and recover their original virtues, winning a new period of self-confidence and power.

That is, if they have not lost too much of their best qualities during the fat, careless and selfish years. For the nature of life and its benefits is struggle, and the individuals or nations that let themselves grow soft are in peril, even while they boast of their own security. Theodore Roosevelt preached this gospel powerfully a generation ago, but it was forgotten.

Jeep Era

When the present unpleasantness is over, and the boys are back home, and things begin to look and feel normal again, there is one little matter that should be attended to while it is fresh in American minds. There should be a monument erected to the Jeep. In fact, there might well be many monuments in honor of that tough little military runabout, for the almost human service it has rendered in so many battles and on so many fronts, in its intimate connection with the fighting forces.

There is another angle to this subject, however, which may not be viewed with so much public enthusiasm. This is the prospect of American youth taking to the Jeep so universally that they will jam the streets and highways everywhere, interfering with other forms of traffic and endangering life.

Infantile Intestinal Ills

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

"SUMMER complaint" which was some form of intestinal infection was once the great infant killer in this country. It still is in many parts of the world. That it has practically disappeared here is due to the success of the campaign for clean and pasteurized milk.

Dr. Clendenning will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Infants still, however, are subject to a good many forms of intestinal upsets, usually taking the form of diarrhea, less frequently of constipation. And no wonder! The baby comes into the world with a brand new set of intestines, but they have never been tried out. And within a few days after birth they have to digest and absorb enough energy to keep that hot little machine going on high. It is no wonder that this takes considerable adjustment in many instances.

In seeking for causes we will not consider here the infectious diarrheas which are due to germs in the milk or food. Those are simply due to supreme carelessness and a reminder of the dark ages. Aside from that there are four common causes of infantile intestinal upsets.

Infantile Intestinal Upsets

1. Overfeeding, or improper feeding.

This is the commonest form and the easiest to recognize and to correct. It results usually from the natural affectionate desire of the mother to see the baby gets plenty to eat or to indulge in some way. It responds quickly to a day or two of underfeeding, simply plenty of warm, sterile water if the symptoms are serious enough. The feeding of pectin agar, or scraped apple is almost specific as a curative agent in most of these cases.

2. Diarrhoea due to infection elsewhere—tonsillitis, middle ear infection, bronchitis or any general infection may touch off the baby's sensitive bowels with an explosive diarrhoea. Here the logical and natural treatment is to go after the underlying cause.

3. Mechanical causes. These are rarer and more serious. They include all of the structural disorders of the intestinal tract, such as congenital dilatation, coeliac disease and tuberculosis. The mother will finally recognize that something is fundamentally wrong because no amount of adjustment or forcing of the feedings serves to correct the condition. These cases are not for amateurs or home treatment. You need a doctor and a good one.

Nutritional or Metabolic Causes

4. There remains a group which can be called the nutritional or metabolic set of causes. They are fairly frequent, not necessarily serious but very troublesome. The great majority of infants adjust themselves to a feeding existence with no trouble at all, considering what a revolutionary change it is for the organism. Infant feeding has been brought to such a fine science that mothers can be given a simple and streamlined set of instructions which work like putting gasoline in a new Ford if you can remember back that far—to the days of new Fords, I mean.

But some infants have a digestive system that is intolerant to starch and some that is intolerant to fat and some have intolerance to lots of things which is generally called allergy and let go at that. Here the mother has to get down to work and take all sorts of pains. No streamlined instructions that avoid trouble for her are possible. The starch intolerant cases begin to show symptoms at about the third to the twelfth month. The fat intolerant at one to eight months. Both kinds usually respond well to a high protein diet. But in all cases the mother must weigh the baby daily, study the stools for starch or fat indigestion and be ready to change the feeding formula in accordance with conditions.

SYNOPSIS

Mary Norman, attractive widow and successful decorator, is delighted when Judith Lambert, daughter of an old friend, dropped in to see her. Judith, whose home is in California, is en route to Maine for the summer. The families had been neighbors before Judith's father died. She asked for Mary's son, Dr. Matthew Norman, adding, "He was my first crush—but he didn't know I existed." Mary tells her that Matthew plans to have his own office soon. Judith promised to stop off again on her way home in the fall. As Mary dressed for dinner with Lynn Mortimer, long her devoted friend, she indulged in a little mental match-making about Judith and her son. For twenty years Lynn's wife has been a mental patient and for almost as long he has been in love with Mary. She is aware of his love but feels there is no room in her busy life for anyone except Matthew. Later, she is stunned when her son telegraphed that he and Irene Murray, a nurse, have just been married. Mary had met Irene but never suspected Matthew's interest was other than platonic. She wired the newlyweds her congratulations but it was too up to sleep. Mary thought of Matthew's practice—now, more than ever, he would need her help to get started. She thought, too, of Judith Lambert. . . . Nevertheless, she concluded, Matthew's judgment was sound—and his happiness was the important thing.

CHAPTER SIX

Where was he, with Irene beside him, tonight?

That query made Mary think of her own wedding night. . . . Tom Norman had been twenty-two and just out of college; in the fall he would go into his father's brokerage concern. She was eighteen, and just out of school. And everyone had said they were too young. His father, and her mother, had said that. So they had run away, one bright blue summer's day and had been married.

Two years; the funny little flat, Tom's job, and the checks her mother sent to help out, and his father's presents. And then Matthew, and when he was a year old the weekend on Long Island.

"Why do you hate horses?" Matthew had asked her when he was quite small. "Why can't I learn to ride?"

She couldn't tell him then, but a horse killed his father. Tom rode away one summer morning and did not come back.

Mary thought, lying there, that it was tragic Tom had not lived to see the man his son had become, that Tom's father had not lived to see Matthew grown.

Matthew and she were alike in that they could not remember their fathers.

It was late when Mary turned out the light, and tried to sleep. She was at the age, she reminded herself ruefully, when women are liable to be nervous. But she'd been sensible about it. Half the battle was in being sensible, in ordering your life so that it included a legitimate amount of rest, in caring for yourself.

When Tom had died she had wished to die and said so. And then she had heard Matthew crying and knew that she must not, that she dared not.

It was nearly light when the telephone rang and she woke instantly, and lay there, trying to control the startled drumming of her heart.

When she put out her hand to the instrument, lifted it from its cradle and spoke, her voice was even. Mary recognized her son's "Mother?"

"Matthew . . . my dear?"

She hadn't cried, not after Lynn had gone, not all night, but she felt the tears rise now and burn back of her lids.

He asked, "You had my wire?"

"Of course . . . I wired you—at the hospital."

"Yes, but we—I haven't been there. I have leave until morning. We just checked in."

"Where are you?"

He named the hotel; it was not far away. She thought: Why, they're almost around the corner!

She said, "You could have come home."

Matthew laughed. "Thanks; I realized that. Mother, Irene has a couple of weeks' vacation. I wondered if you—"

She said instantly, "Of course . . . she must come here."

"She'll be around in the morning. Sorry I can't. I'll see you as soon as I can . . . Irene wants to speak to you."

The girl's voice, low, steady, just as Mary recalled it, came to her ears. "Mrs. Norman?"

"Irene," responded Mary, "I—I'm very happy for you."

"Then," said Irene, "everything's all right."

Matthew broke in, it was evident he had taken the receiver from his wife. He said, "Good night, mother . . . with an undercurrent of laughter in his voice."

The connection was severed and she lay there watching the slowly graying sky and the dawning pale gold.

And in the hotel, not very far away, Matthew took his wife in his arms. She was quiet there and grave, a small, lightly boned girl with a deceptive look of fragility.

He said, "Everything's fine; don't look so troubled."

"But your mother . . . I keep thinking of her."

He said, "Told you not to worry, she'd understand."

Irene sighed. "You didn't give me time to think."

"Why should I? I'll do the thinking for this family from now on."

"And what am I supposed to do?"

"Love me," he urged, with his lips against the silky hair, "love me . . ."

"But I've been doing that," Irene said, "for a long time, for two whole years."

In the morning, toward noon, Mary's bell rang and she went hurriedly from her room to the hall.

"I'll answer," she told Kate, "I think it must be—Mrs. Norman."

She stumbled a little over that.

It was Irene, and behind her one of the elevator boys with her luggage.

gase. She looked smaller than even in her dark suit, and her swanlike hair curled from underneath the little bonnet.

"Come in," smiled Mary mechanically. "I've been waiting for you."

"Matthew thought you'd be at the shop," said Irene hesitantly, "he forgot to ask you, so I telephoned there before I came."

"No, I've been waiting for you. The shop can get along without me, for a day or so. Let Kate take your things. I'll show you Matthew's room—your room," she corrected herself.

But Irene sat down on the big couch, her knees close together, her back stiff, unrelaxed. She said, and only her hands betrayed her nervousness, "I realize, Mrs. Norman, far better than Matthew, how hurt you must be, and how disappointed."

"I am neither," protested Mary. "I was startled—I'll admit that. But no more." She smiled. "Don't look so desperate," she counseled; "If you knew us—me—you would know that I have been anxious for Matthew to marry. Perhaps I didn't visualize it until after he was practicing, but I am not," she said rather self-consciously, "a possessive person."

Irene looked at her thoughtfully. She said, "No, I can see that. But Matthew is."

Mary looked at her with a little shock of surprise. She asked, "Do you really think that?"

"Yes."

Mary said gently, because it embarrassed her to say it, "You're terribly in love."

Irene flushed. "Yes . . . I tried to persuade him that we must wait. But you know how he is . . . he wouldn't; he said, why should we waste a year, two years, when we could be together?" She smiled, and an unexpected dimple showed and disappeared. "But we won't be, the bride added, 'hardly at all in fact, with his work and mine.'"

"Your work?" My dear child, what in the world are you saying?"

Irene looked astonished. "I'll go on working of course," she remarked; "it's only until late autumn."

"But," said Mary, bewildered, "I thought . . . I mean, last night I decided that naturally you would live here with me, and Matthew could come here on his time off, and then we'd look for an apartment."

Irene shook her head, soberly. "You won't be offended if I say I would rather not? My dear child, made a home for Matthew, Mrs. Norman, all these years. I want to, now; it's better for all of us. You don't know me."

"But I would, I will!"

"Yes," said Irene, "but you'll know me . . . better, shall we say, more easily, if I'm not under your feet all the time. It was kind of you to let me stay with you, for the next two weeks. I thought that during that time you might help me look for a little place . . . I can arrange to live out of the nurses' home now," she said, "and I can be at the apartment on my days off and when Matthew is free, evenings."

President Puts More Drama in Politics

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt's hand trembled with nervous emotion, and he stopped once to light a cigaret and compose himself, as he told a news conference that he would accept a fourth term if the American people vote it.

The chief executive put on a dramatic performance for a relatively small group of reporters. Only 99 attended the unusual Tuesday morning conference in comparison with 200 or more at some conferences.

The conference began with Mr. Roosevelt relating the results of his talks with Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the French National Committee.

When this subject had been exhausted, the chief executive cautioned reporters that they should not give the usual conference closing sign, "Thank you, Mr. President."

Mr. Roosevelt explained that he had something further to say. Anyway, he added, he had had the doors locked.

Merriman Smith of the United Press commented that if the doors were locked it must mean that something important was coming up.

Bert Andrews of the New York Herald-Tribune, who in past conferences has asked many fourth-term questions without success, put in:

"Is this about your fourth term intentions, Mr. Roosevelt?"

"That is purely speculation but for once you are right," Mr. Roosevelt replied with a grin.

Nobody said anything.

The president, smiling broadly, said did you hear that? Then there was an uneasy, excited stir as reporters realized that the story they had worked so long to get was now being handed them on a platter.

Until the chief executive read his exchange of letters with Democratic National Chairman Hannegan, there was no hint as to whether his answer would be yes or no but everyone, in view of the political situation, had assumed it would be yes.

When the president got down to the part of Hannegan's letter saying there would be a "clear majority" of votes to nominate him at the convention, he threw down the paper he was reading, and said he had to have a cigaret.

Though his hands trembled, he joked and said, unfortunately, it isn't a Murad—a brand which stresses nonchalance in its advertising.

After lighting his cigaret, he picked up the letters again and read on more calmly.

Before reading the letters, the president explained why he had had the doors locked. He wanted, he said, to save human life, by reducing accidents where possible. He said he had anticipated the reporters' rush for their telephones.

When he had finished Hannegan's letter he explained that he dictated his own last night and it was rather hurried. Then he read it, obviously under a strain of some excitement. For once his normally well-paced and clear voice hit such a speed and dropped so low that a reported asked him to speak louder.

When he had concluded his own letter, some one called the usual closing "Thank you, Mr. President," but Merriman Smith interjected—"Wait a minute," and asked:

"What about the talk you had with Vice President Wallace yesterday Mr. President?"

Laughing, Mr. Roosevelt said they had just talked about China and closed the conference with these words:

Now get out.

Commodore Perry introduced the idea of rail transportation in Japan when he set up a model line in 1852, on the beach of Yokohama.

WASHINGTON—Insofar as the State Department is concerned, protocol is "the rules prescribing etiquette in ceremonies of state" or in social functions attended by representatives of other countries to this nation.

It's important, too; so important that the department has a division of experts, headed by Stanley Woodward, whose responsibility it is to figure out everything from who gets the first glass of grape punch to how many guns are fired for visiting dignitaries.

IN 1943 the American public spent $450,000,000 on furs. The U. S. Government received $45,000,000 in taxes from this expenditure. This year, with the tax doubled, the purchase of furs will be carefully planned with emphasis on the durable and classic rather than the novelty type of fur coat. Esther Dorothy, famous for her handling of magnificent mink, uses fur like a fabric, as can be seen from the accompanying picture. It is simply cut for long wear, has a full blouse and full swing back, extra wide sleeves and generous turn-back cuffs.

Markets and Finance

IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, July 12—AP—While price changes were mixed, today's stock market continued to display underlying stability with volume down from the average of recent sessions.

Irregular from the outset the list was about even on fractional gains and losses near the fourth hour. Rails had a little better support than other key groups.

Buying interest in the general run of industrial leaders was marked by some restraint, indicating doubt in the minds of speculative followers as to the market's ability to continue the past month's sharp rise without undergoing a corrective reaction.
